CONCLUDED TO WALK.

They Could Make it Afoot Before Train Time.

Three countrymen with a jug whiskey and two ragged small boys one of whom played or rather blew ncessantly on a French harp, got off a street car at Sixth and Trimble this morning, discussing their chances o catching a Mayfield train.

The man who had the jug wore dirty shirt and one suspender, his overalls serving him as pantaloons He wore no shoes, and his feet were neither small nor petty. The other were attired on the same order, but were not so bad.

They asked the first man they met at the depot when the train for May field left and were told at 2:20 this afternoon and then went to the ticket ffice and propounded the same ques tion. They received the same answer. and all three, assisted by the two coungsters the one with the French harp stopping long enough for the purpose, began to swear.

Not satisfied with the abundance of information they had already se ured, they went to the baggage mas ter, and not until be and all his as sistants and the lunch man assured hem that there was no train to May field until this afternoon were they

"Humph! I kin walk 'er afore 2:20."

They all acquiesced, all except boys, who had no vote in that convention, and the last seen of them they were still walking out the track lowards Mayfield, the man holding tight to his jug and the boy to the French harp. It is safe to predict, however, that when they reached Mayfield there was no contents in the jug and no wind in the boy with the musical instrument.
